

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

Dr. Mericia Mila A. Amador

GREETINGS TO ALL STUDENTS!

This module is designed to help you examine the dimension of communication styles to improve your communication skills. Particularly, you will be taught how to communicate with clarity for an interview and for team communication.

Communication is an essential life skill that can be continually developed and enhanced. Thus, this module aims to help you not only become a better communicator, but also prepare you as future professionals.

At the end of this module, you will find an assessment to evaluate what you have learned.

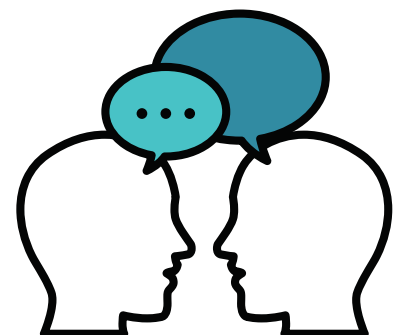

Enjoy learning!

“Communication – the human connection – is the key to personal and career success.”

PAUL J. MEYER

TOPICS IN THIS MODULE

- WAYS TO COMMUNICATE WITH CLARITY
- IMPROVING INTERVIEW SKILLS
- LEARNING TEAM COMMUNICATION
- CONTRIBUTING TO POSITIVE GROUP DYNAMICS

COMMUNICATION

Communication comes from the Latin word "communicare", which means "to share". To communicate is to establish "commonness" with someone. (Schramm, 2012)

Theodorson and Theodorson (1969) define communication as the transmission of information, ideas, attitudes, or emotion from one person or group to another (or others) primarily through symbols.

Scholars have defined communication in several ways.

Definitions of communication:

- Communication is a transaction.
When people communicate, they continually offer definitions of themselves to their perceived definitions of the others (Stewart, 1990).
- Communication is a convergence of mutual understanding (Rogers and Kincaid, 1981).
- Communication happens whenever information is passed from one place to another. It is not simply the verbal, explicit, and intentional transmission of message; it includes all those processes by which people influence one another (Black and Bryant, 1992)
- Communication is a process by which participants create and share information with one another in order to reach a mutual understanding. (Rogers, 1983)

Since communication is defined as a process, it follows that it has elements that interact together.

ELEMENTS OF THE COMMUNICATION PROCESS

SOURCE

- refers to a person or a group of persons "with a purpose, a reason for engaging in communication" (Berlo, 1961).

- initiates the communication process.
- also referred to as the encoder, sender, information source, or communicator

RECEIVER

- is the person or group of persons at the other end of the communication process. (Berlo, 1961).

- the target of communication
- listens when the source talks;
- the receiver reads what the source writes.

”

Communication works for those who work at it.

JOHN POWELL

MESSAGE

- the information that the source wants to relay to the receiver

- an idea, purpose, or intention that has been translated into a code or a systematic set of symbols (Berlo, 1961).

CHANNEL

- the way in which a message or messages travel between source and receiver.

include face-to-face conversations, speeches, phone conversations, letters, newspaper and magazine articles, blogs, email, text messages, tweets, etc.

EFFECT

- the outcome of a communication or the response of the receiver to the message of the source.

FEEDBACK

- The receivers' verbal and nonverbal responses to a message

- can be a nod for understanding (nonverbal), a raised eyebrow for being confused (nonverbal), or asking a question to clarify the message (verbal)

”

Communication works for those who work at it.

JOHN POWELL

Image credit: <https://www.thoughtco.com/what-is-communication-1689877>

TYPES OF COMMUNICATION

There are two types of communication based on channel; verbal communication and nonverbal communication.

A. Verbal communication

- message is transmitted verbally
- communication is done by word of mouth and writing.

In verbal communication always remember the acronym KISS - keep it short and simple.

Verbal Communication is further divided into two, oral and written.

1. Oral /spoken communication:

In oral communication, spoken words are used. It includes face-to-face conversations, speech, telephone conversation, video, radio, and television.

Examples of spoken communication in the workplace include conversations, interviews, counselling, meetings, conferences and so on (Wenbin Nah, 2008).

In oral communication, communication is influenced by pitch, volume, speed and clarity of speaking.

Advantages and Disadvantages of Verbal Communication

ADVANTAGES

1. Messages can be edited and revised many time before it is actually sent.
2. Written communication is good for complicated and vital instructions, which can be given in a precise and uniform manner.
3. Written communication helps in laying down apparent principles, policies and rules for running of an organization.
4. It is a permanent means of communication: written instructions can be used for future references.

DISADVANTAGES

1. Poor presentation of the message or the instruction can result in misunderstanding and wrong responses.
2. Relying only on oral communication may not be sufficient as business communication is formal and very organized.
3. Usually informal and not as organized as written communication.
4. Oral communication is time-saving as far as daily interactions are concerned, but in case of meetings, long speeches consume lot of time and are unproductive at times.

ADVANTAGES

5. Feedback is spontaneous in oral communication. Thus, decisions can be made quickly without any delay.
6. Not only time saving, but it also saves money and efforts
7. Best in case of problem resolution. Conflicts, disputes and many issues can be put to an end by talking them over.
8. Oral communication is an essential for teamwork and group energy.
9. Promotes a receptive and encouraging morale among organizational employees.
10. Oral communication can be best used to transfer private and confidential information/matter.

DISADVANTAGES

5. It requires attentiveness and great receptivity on part of the receivers/audience.
6. Oral communication (such as speeches) is not frequently used as legal records except in investigation work.
7. Spoken communication is influenced by both verbal and non-verbal communication such as tone or body language which may twist the meaning of your message in the mind of the receiver.

2. Written communication:

- written signs or symbols are used to communicate.
- can be transmitted via letter, report, memo, bulletins, job descriptions, employee manuals, telegrams, faxes, contracts, advertisements, and electronic mail (email), news releases, etc.

Message, in written communication, is influenced by the vocabulary and grammar used, writing style, precision and clarity of the language used.

Written communication is the most common form of communication being used in business.

Advantages and Disadvantages of Written Communication

ADVANTAGES

1. Messages can be edited and revised many time before it is actually sent.
2. Written communication is good for complicated and vital instructions, which can be given in a precise and uniform manner.
3. It is a permanent means of communication: written instructions can be used for future references.
4. Legal defenses depend upon written communication as it provides valid records
5. Reader can read the information at a pace that suits them.

DISADVANTAGES

1. It does not answer questions instantly and there is no immediate feedback.
2. People may not always read them.
3. Written communication takes time.
4. It is impersonal or unfriendly.
5. Effective written communication requires great skills and competencies in language and vocabulary use.
6. Too much paper work

b. Non-verbal communication

According to McConnell, (2003), nonverbal communication is behavior, other than spoken or written communication, that creates or represents meaning. In other words, it includes facial expressions, body movements, and gestures. Nonverbal communication is talking without speaking a word.

It is very effective, maybe even more so than speech. As the saying goes,

“Actions speak louder than words.”

Argyle (1988) concluded that there are five primary functions of nonverbal bodily behavior in human communication namely:-

1. Express emotions
2. Express interpersonal attitudes
3. To accompany speech in managing the cues of interaction between speakers and listeners
4. Self-presentation of one's personality
5. Rituals (greetings)

Advantages and Disadvantages of Non-verbal Communication

ADVANTAGES

1. Able to communicate in places where you have to avoid talking audibly.
2. Able to communicate with someone who cannot hear.
3. Able to communicate without others around you hearing what is being communicated.
4. Able to communicate when a person is too far away from you to hear you (for example, by gesturing)
5. Non-verbal communication can be used as a tool to communicate with people who don't understand your language

DISADVANTAGES

1. Long conversations using non-verbal communication are usually not possible.
2. Non-verbal communication varies from culture to culture.
3. Particulars of messages using non-verbal communication cannot be discussed in detail.
4. It is not useful as a public tool for communication
5. It cannot be used everywhere and is less influential than verbal communication.

"This concludes my lecture on non-verbal communication. Any comments or questions?"

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

Communication is a day-to-day activity that we engage in. It may be a simple chit-chat with a friend or colleague or a presentation in-front of a panel.

However, communication needs to be effective in order to foster harmonious relationship in an organization. Without effective communication, there will be no understanding and teamwork in the workplace. Thus, this could lead to misunderstandings and conflict.

Effective communication is the process of sending a message in such a way that the message received is as close in meaning as possible to the message intended. (Griffin, 2002)

Scott Cutlip and Allen Center in 1952 in their book, Effective Public Relations listed 7 characteristics of an effective communication.

1. Completeness

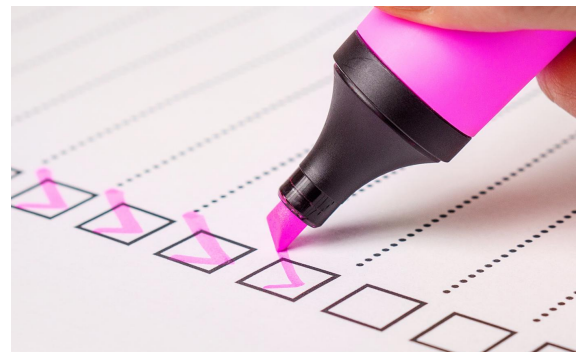

Communication must be complete.

It should convey all facts required by the audience.

The sender of the message must take into consideration the receiver's mind set and convey the message accordingly.

A complete communication has following features:

- Gives additional information wherever required.
- Leaves no questions in the mind of receiver.
- Helps in better decision-making by the audience/ readers/receivers of message as they get all desired and crucial information.
- It persuades the audience

2. Conciseness

Communicating what you want to convey in least possible words (without forgoing the other C's of communication).

Concise communication has following features:

- Is time-saving as well as cost-saving.
- Highlights the main message as it avoids using excessive and needless words.
- Is non-repetitive in nature

TIPS IN COMMUNICATING CONCISELY

1. Eliminate unnecessary phrases and redundancies.
 - Correct: We will be home in ten days.
 - Incorrect: We will be home in a period of ten days.
2. Use clear and straightforward language.
 - Correct: I have noticed many weeds growing around the building.
 - Incorrect: It has come to my attention that there is a vast proliferation of undesirable vegetation surrounding the periphery of this facility.
3. Write in active voice.
 - Correct: This week, the committee decided to vote on the issue.
 - Incorrect: A decision to vote on the issue was made by the committee this week.
4. Shorten wordy phrases.
 - Correct: Jon will call me if he can go.
 - Incorrect: Jon will let me know in the event that he can get away and make the trip.
5. Eliminate extra nouns.
 - Correct: Luis was interested in data processing.
 - Incorrect: Luis was interested in the data processing field.
6. Eliminate filler words such as "that", "of", or "up".
 - Correct: I said I was tired.
 - Incorrect: I said that I was tired.

3. Consideration

Implies “stepping into the shoes of others”.

Effective communication must take the audience into consideration (the audience’s view points, background, mind-set, education level, etc.)

Features of considerate communication are as follows:

- Emphasize on “you” approach.
- Empathize with the audience and exhibit interest in the audience. This will stimulate a positive reaction from the audience.
- Show optimism towards your audience.
- Emphasize on “what is possible” rather than “what is impossible”.

4. Clarity

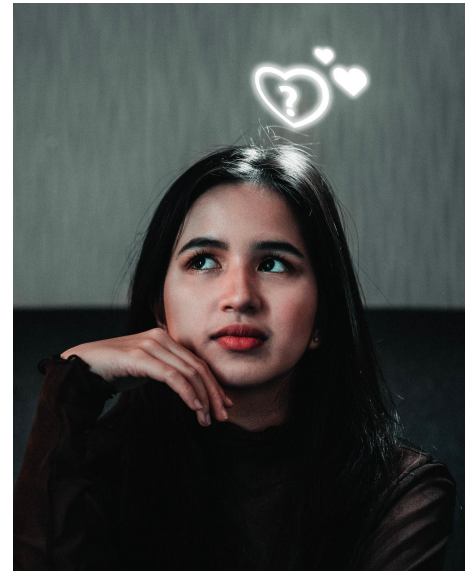

The message should be clear.

Use precise words that are familiar and appropriate to your particular audience.

Clarity in communication has the following features:

- makes understanding easier
- enhances the meaning of message
- makes use of exact, appropriate words

Clarity is best achieved through short, simple and fluent sentences and paragraphs.

TIP: Always follow this, that, these, and those with a noun.

Unclear: I will take this. (This what?)

Clear: I will take this book.

Unclear: I do not want that. (Want what?)

Clear: I do not want that color.

5. Concreteness

Concrete communication implies being particular and clear rather than uncertain and general. Concreteness strengthens the confidence.

Concrete message has following features:

- Supported with specific facts and figures.
- Makes use of words that are clear and that build the reputation.
- Not misinterpreted

Examples:

Vague/Unclear: He won several awards.

Concrete: He won first prize in three national contests in the past two years.

Vague/Unclear: He spends a lot of time in the garden.

Concrete: He spends eight hours a day in the garden.

6. Courtesy

Courtesy in message implies the message should show the sender's expression as well as should respect the receiver. Courteous communication is friendly, open, and honest. There are no hidden insults or passive-aggressive tones.

Courteous message has following features:

- Takes into consideration the viewpoints and feelings of the receiver
- Is focused at the audience
- Makes use of terms showing respect for the receiver
- Not biased

REMEMBER: If you do not respect the person to whom you are speaking, your language and your non-verbal communication will communicate that.

7. Correctness

When your communication is correct, it fits your audience.

correct communication is error-free communication.

Things to consider:

- Do the technical terms you use fit your audience's level of education or knowledge?
- Have you checked your writing or speech for grammatical errors?
- Are all names and titles spelled or said correctly?

10 TIPS FOR EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

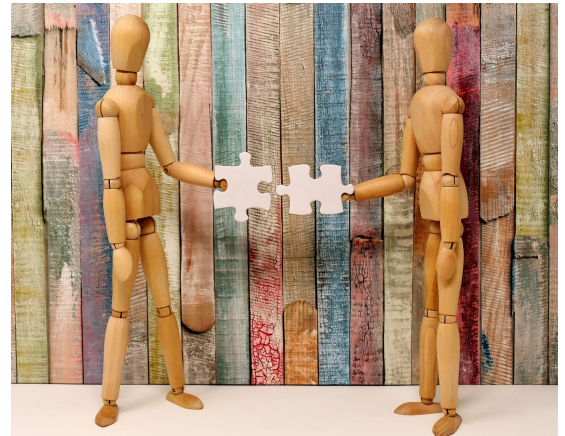

By LIZ KINGSNORTH

(<http://www.heartfulnessmagazine.com/10-tips-for-effective-communication/>)

1. AN INTENTION FOR CONNECTION.

Aim for a respectful and compassionate quality of connection, so that everyone can express themselves, be heard and understood.

Trust that the connection is more important and more nourishing than being right, or even just having your say. Connection means to try to be open and stay in touch with what matters to the other person – and to yourself – in each present moment.

2. LISTEN MORE THAN YOU SPEAK.

We have two ears and one mouth – a reminder of what is important!

Listening is key to a healthy relationship. Often we are only half listening, waiting for our chance to speak, wanting to make our point. When our attention is with our own thoughts, we are not listening. Listening means to enter into the world of the other person, to intend to understand them, even if we disagree with what they are saying.

3. UNDERSTAND THE OTHER PERSON FIRST.

When another person feels you understand them, they are far more likely to be open to understanding you. Willingness to understand involves generosity, respect, self-control, compassion and patience. Be 'curious instead of furious' about how others are different from you.

4. UNDERSTAND NEEDS, WISHES AND VALUES.

Everything people say and do expresses an underlying need, longing or value.

We can learn to identify and 'hear' these needs, even when they are not expressed explicitly. Because all human beings share these needs, they are our magic key to unlocking mutual understanding.

5. BEGIN WITH EMPATHY.

Refrain from:

- Immediately telling your own similar story
- Interrogating with lots of data-type questions
- Interpreting the other's experience
- Giving advice
- One-upping e.g.
"if you think that's bad wait till you hear about what happened to me!"
- Dismissing the person's feelings, e.g. "Oh don't be angry."
- Dismissing the person's experience, or telling the person that this experience is actually good for them!
- Generally people appreciate receiving empathy more than anything else.

6. TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR YOUR FEELINGS.

What someone else says or does is not the cause for how we feel, it is the trigger.

Our feelings are stimulated by what's happening. For example, if someone does not do what they say they will do, we might tell them, "You make me so angry, you are so unreliable!" This inflammatory accusation could be rephrased as, "I feel frustrated because it's important to me that we keep to agreements we have made."

7. MAKE REQUESTS THAT ARE PRACTICAL, SPECIFIC AND POSITIVE.

Don't ask things of others that are too vague or too big, or are expressed as a negative request, e.g.

"Stop making so much noise." Be positive and specific, e.g. "I am working. Can you please use the headphones while playing video games?"

8. USE ACCURATE, NEUTRAL DESCRIPTIONS

When we are upset, we often interpret what has happened, using judgmental language, rather than accurately describing what has triggered us.

First describe the situation in a neutral, accurate way, free of judgments or blame. Then the communication can continue with sharing feelings, needs and requests.

9. BE WILLING TO HEAR “NO”.

Even with these guidelines, our carefully expressed requests might still elicit a “No” from the other person. We have a choice in how we hear that “No”. It could be that something else is important to the other person; that they had a different need or value in that moment. Maybe the “No” is their request for something else to happen.

10. WAYS WE COMMUNICATE OTHER THAN WORDS.

Everything that is in our heart and mind is expressed through our body, our facial expressions, the tone of our voice, and the vibrations that emanate from us.

All these are intuitively picked up and understood by others. We are manifesting our consciousness at every moment. To have connection, understanding and harmony in our relationships, we need to nourish those aspects deeply within ourselves.

IMPROVING INTERVIEW SKILLS

Effective communication plays an important role to an individual's development and well-being. It is also a necessary skill needed to succeed in one's personal and professional life.

In job interviews, one's ability to communicate well is a major factor that the interviewer judges. If you can communicate effectively, you can easily talk about your strengths and achievements, answer difficult questions without sounding nervous and convey your eagerness to become part of the organization.

REMEMBER: The keys to a successful interview are preparation and practice.

Rebecca Corfield in her book "How to prepare, answer tough questions and get your ideal job", listed a few do's and don'ts for job interviews:

- ✓ Do be prepared to do some work in advance to help you do your best.
- ✓ Do treat each interview as a chance to see what you think and feel about the employer.
- ✓ Do approach each interview positively – it may be an opportunity to move your career forward.
- ✗ Don't turn down an interview just because you are scared – this job could have your name on it.
- ✗ Don't think that you can just breeze in – proper preparation is vital.
- ✗ Don't let panic get the better of you – you are more likely to succeed if you keep calm.

BEFORE THE INTERVIEW

1. Research about the company and the position you're applying or interviewing for.

Collect all the information you can about the vacancy and the organization. Recruiters and hiring managers don't just want to know about your skills and experience – they also want to know how knowledgeable you are about the company.

2. Practice answering interview questions

Write down a list of possible questions that you think may be asked, Then have a friend act as an interviewer and direct them to you in a practice interview situation. Practicing beforehand will make you feel more comfortable and relaxed during the interview.

TIP: You can rehearse for an interview at home by yourself or with a friend or family member.

There are simple ways to practice including using flash cards, dressing in interview clothes to practice, and recording yourself interviewing then playing it back to see how you did.

3. Dress professionally and make sure you are well-groomed

Visual impressions are very important. Therefore, if in doubt, always dress on the conservative side. You do not want to appear showy or quirky in your choice of clothes but you should look clean and smart.

4. Be on time.

Do not arrive late. Nothing destroys your chance at impressing an employer more than arriving late and offering no explanation. Try to arrive at the interview location a little early. This gives you time to determine where you need to go, and will give you a few minutes to collect your thoughts.

DURING THE INTERVIEW

1. Listen

From the very beginning of the interview, your interviewer is giving you information, either directly or indirectly. If you are not hearing it, you are missing a major opportunity.

REMEMBER: During a job interview, listening is just as important as answering questions. If you're not paying attention, you're not going to be able to give a good response.

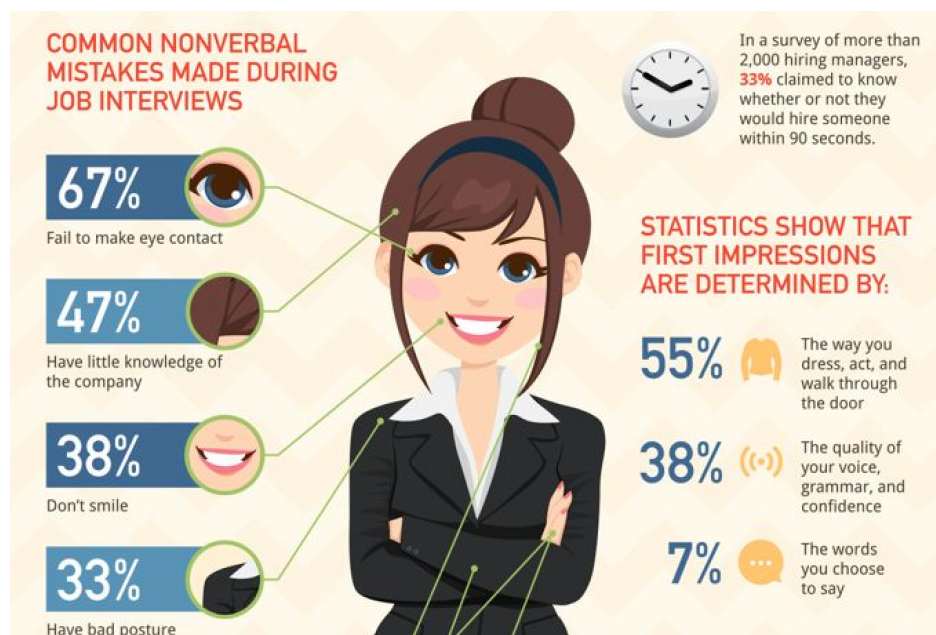

2. Make a good impression

First impressions take only thirty seconds. Establishing rapport, direct and sustained eye contact, a firm handshake, a warm smile, good posture, and introducing yourself in a confident manner are important ingredients.

SOME TIPS:

- Always maintain eye contact
- Try to smile often. A smile denotes confidence in a candidate.
- Don't be afraid to use some hand animation while answering questions. This suggests enthusiasm in a candidate.
- Use good posture, Sit up straight. Never slouch.
- Speak clearly. Don't mumble. It portrays a lack of confidence. Speak with assurance. This indicates confidence.

<https://www.trendhunter.com/trends/job-interview-advice>

DURING THE INTERVIEW

3. Prove what you could do: Sell yourself

- Always put a positive spin on your answers to difficult questions.
- If you lack a particular skill or do not know a certain computer program, be sure to emphasize how quickly you learn.
- Give an example of a time when you were able to get up to speed in a similar situation.

4. Know Your Resume

Be prepared to talk about every fact that is on your resume. Many people embellish their accomplishments on their resumes. Avoid this, since the only point of reference an interviewer has about you is the resume you provide to him/her beforehand.

5. Be Truthful

Don't lie when asked about something you haven't done. The next question will be "tell us about it." It is better to turn down a job that you're not a good match that try to "fake it til you make it."

6. Give brief answers

Make your answer concise and to the point. Rambling tends to suggest that you really don't have the answer to the questions asked.

7. Don't be afraid to clarify.

If you are unsure of what the interviewer is asking you, politely request a more detailed information.

8. Be yourself.

Don't use vocabulary that you don't understand or pretend to be someone you're not. There's no point in faking your way through a job interview only to land in a role that isn't suited to your interests, skills, or passions. You'll end up disappointed, and so will the company that hired you.

REMEMBER: Before leaving, thank the interviewer for taking the time to interview you.

COMMON INTERVIEW QUESTIONS AND SUGGESTED WAY TO ANSWER THEM

SOURCE: <https://www.hws.edu/academics/career/pdfs/intvq.pdf>

QUESTION: Tell me about yourself.

ANSWER: This is the dreaded, classic, open-ended interview question and likely to be among the first. It's your chance to introduce your qualifications, good work habits, etc. Keep it mostly work and career related.

QUESTION: What are your strengths?

ANSWER: Point out your positive attributes related to the job.

Try one of these:

a. Appetite for Learning

Know-hows improve with exposure to diverse situations. I have an eagerness for new challenges which is essential.

b. Ambition

A desire to achieve something visible and noteworthy propels individual leaders and their companies to strive to reach their potential.

c. Confidence

You have to be able to listen to your own inner voice and endure the lonely moments when an important decision falls on your shoulders. You have to be able to speak your mind and act decisively, knowing that you can withstand the consequences.

QUESTION: What are your weaknesses?

ANSWER: Everybody has weaknesses, but don't spend too much time on this one and keep it work related. Along with a minor weakness or two, try to point out a couple of weaknesses that the interviewer might see as strengths, such as sometimes being a little too meticulous about the quality of your work.

Example answer: "I'm very self-aware of the things that I can improve on, which some would call "weaknesses" and those would be [proficiency with X tool or program / giving feedback to colleagues or manager(s) / multi-tasking under pressure]. I'm actively working on this, though, and am always getting better."

QUESTION: Explain how you overcame a major obstacle.

ANSWER: The interviewer is likely looking for a particular example of your problem-solving skills and the pride you show for solving it.

COMMON INTERVIEW QUESTIONS AND SUGGESTED WAY TO ANSWER THEM

SOURCE: <https://www.hws.edu/academics/career/pdfs/intvq.pdf>

QUESTION: Why should we hire you?

ANSWER: Point out your positive attributes related to the job, and the good job you've done in the past. Include any compliments you've received from management. The key is to be specific to THIS role and THIS company, and what you can offer them rather than just what you can get out of the role.

Example answer: "Because I have all of the skills you're looking for in this role and the enthusiasm about the company that will help me thrive here. I also believe I can contribute positively to the company culture by [X]...."

QUESTION: Where do you see yourself in five years?

ANSWER: Explain your career-advancement goals that are in line with the job for which you are interviewing. It's not a good idea to tell your potential new boss that you'll be going after his or her job, but it's okay to mention that you'd like to earn a senior or management position.

You may say: "In five years I'd like to be an established team member of a company like this where I [will have mastered skills that I'm just learning now / will take on new responsibilities and learn the next level of skills I'd need to continue my career path / will have taken on a leadership role where I am helping manage and grow others]"

QUESTION: How do you handle pressure and stress?

ANSWER: Saying that you whine to your friends, kick your dog or slam down a bottle of alcohol are not good answers. Exercising, relaxing with a good book, socializing with friends or turning stress into productive energy are more along the lines of the "correct" answer. Remember, this is a chance to demonstrate your ability to stay calm and work through any tough situation, and also your emotional intelligence.

Example answer: I deal with pressure or stressful situations by [reminding myself that things are temporary / making sure I stay grounded and understand what I can and cannot change / knowing when and how to ask for help from my team members or manager] and taking things one step at a time."

TEAM COMMUNICATION

Team communication is the foundation of team collaboration. To work together, you must communicate. To work together well, you have to make sure your team communication is stellar.

All the interaction and exchanges of information that happens in a team is team communication. Regardless of the type of team and its tasks, all team members need to interact and exchange information in order to achieve their goals.

WHY IS TEAM COMMUNICATION IMPORTANT?

1. It enables positive team relationships

Effective communication helps to unite teams, build a positive atmosphere in the workplace and encourage collaborative working, which leads to improved employee engagement, increased efficiency and productivity.

When team leaders are truly effective communicators, they are able to maintain an open dialogue with other team members and create a safe environment for them to express their concerns, opinions and ideas without being shut-down.

2. It helps to prevent misunderstandings and conflicts

Poor communication always results in misunderstandings and conflicts. Unresolved or poorly navigated conflicts can damage and even destroy relationships with customers, employees or co-workers. Although conflicts cannot always be avoided, they can be effectively managed and resolved without negative consequences.

”

The greatest problem with communication is we don't listen to understand. We listen to reply.

ROY T. BENNETT

3. Growth of the Organization

It ensures better decision making, intensifies public relations and enhances problem solving ability. All this leads to corporate growth and development.

4. Build Strong Relationships

Interactions often simplify things; they positively motivate the employees to perform better and maintain long-term relations with others in the organization.

5. Ascertain Transparency and Develops Trust

Effective communication is considered to be a base for building trust and assures sharing of complete information.

6. Facilitates Creativity and Innovation

It creates an environment where employees are free to share their ideas by exploring their creative and innovative side.

TIPS FOR TEAM COMMUNICATION

1. Give Your Whole Attention

Be mindful of how you're communicating. Offering a full focus by maintaining eye contact during conversations and meetings will contribute greatly to effective communication. Nod your head affirmatively while in a conversation to convey your focus visually.

2. Practice Active Listening

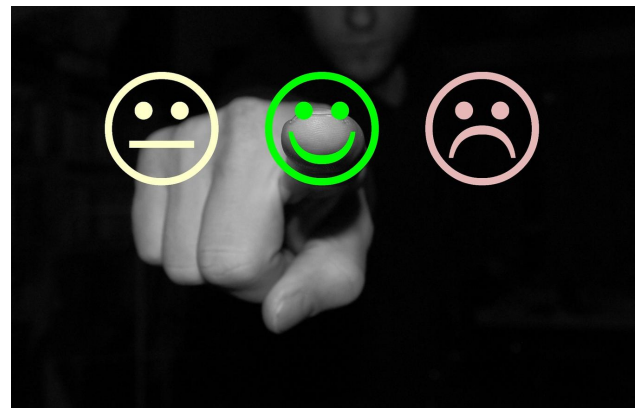

Employees who listen well tend to work better. Listening is twice as important as talking and one big important part of effective communication skills in business. Listening should not be taken for granted. Do not just sit back, barely awake, letting the speaker's words wash over you. The more you listen well, the better you receive the information.

3. Don't Beat Around the Bush

Whether you're into a verbal communication or non-verbal communication, do not get into a long speech to get your point across. Be mindful of everyone's time - be brief, to the point, and balance brevity with a human touch.

4. Encourage two-way feedback

In order to have smooth work environment, it is important to have two way communication. Encouraging two-way feedback is a sign of good communication in workplace that will give your team a chance to self-evaluate. Give detailed feedback to increase team communication and to coach your team members.

5. Show appreciation

Tell your employees, coworkers and colleagues about how much you care and respect them. Showing appreciation is an effective way to deal with low employee morale and to make your team members feel like they matter. This a method to promote communication in team.

”

The most important thing in communication is hearing what is'nt said.

PETER DRUCKER

ASSESSMENT

MODULE 2: EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

Name: _____
Course and Section: _____
Campus: _____

Date Taken: _____

FAULT FINDER

INSTRUCTION:

Identify what mistake or wrong communication practice is demonstrated in the following scenarios. Then explain briefly why it is considered a mistake. Use a separate sheet or extra page if necessary.

1. Whenever someone is talking to me, I think about what I am going to say next to make sure I get my point across correctly. I only focus on what my reply would be and how I would react to the statements being said.

2. Before I communicate, I think about how I could impress the audience I am addressing. I don't focus on what the person needs to know because I assume that the information I will share will be easily understandable.

3. When communicating, I use technical terms, jargons and difficult words in order to sound knowledgeable.

MOCK INTERVIEW

INSTRUCTION: Using your cellphone camera (or the voice recorder feature), record a 30 second video/voice over while answering this question: "What do you do for fun?"

Reminders:

- Introduce yourself first (state your name and course) and then state your answer.
- Stay tuned for the details on where to send the file/recording.